The procedures used during the dissection were as follows. Breast muscle contour was measured by pressing and moulding a piece of wire (plastic-coated copper wire with an outer diameter of 3 mm) against the contour of each breast from the midpoint along the length of the keel. The area beneath 9.5 cm of the arc formed by the piece of wire was traced onto paper and measured by planimetry for

The retroperitoneal space was enlarged by blunt dissection with the surgeon's hand. The graft with the cooling device was brought into the operative field through the incision and properly positioned for anastomosis. The vessels anastomotic technique used in the present study was the same as that described in our previous studies[6,7]. The renal vein and artery were anastomosed to the pig 0A
