The Invisible Wall, begins when Harry Bernstein was four years old. Harry was raised in the English mill town of Stockport. His father worked in a tailor shop, while his mother struggled to feed, clothe, and educate their children. Much of his father's meager salary went for his drinking and gambling, and the family was poorer than most. The family were observant Jews, whose life revolved around the Sabbath and Holy Days. The street the family lived on was populated with similar families. The Invisible Wall: A Love Story That... book by Harry ...
